WHAT YOUR QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Depression set in when the beginning of school was mentioned in August conversations. And right on schedule, that certain atmosphere returned the first day. Sixth graders searching for lockers fought through the intricate weave of older students. Freshmen wearily waited to start new schedules and tried to hide their nervousness. Veteran high schoolers calmly watched for any new students in their classes.

Teachers, however, said they enjoyed "the new beginning." Students, on the other hand, said they waited with anticipation for fall break.

Another kind of fall break took place when employees of the local Certified Supermarket, went on strike for several weeks. Shoppers found it an inconvenience because they had to drive further. In sports, Cedar Lake briefly played host to the Olympic flame on its way to Los Angeles. Later, the girls won PCC titles in volleyball and basketball. The mid-February snow storm left students with four straight days off.

The 1985 KEY: "We Asked/You Answered." This yearbook theme brought more questions than the KEY expected. Why all the questions? The staff wanted student participation. Ten years from now when memories have faded a bit, the thoughts and feelings in the KEY will help bring these fleeting months back to life. With all these questions, students were able to voice their opinions and share their experiences. Questions varied from embarrassing moments to favorite songs to future plans. The KEY wanted students to know it was their yearbook. What do you think?

WHAT? SPOT COVERAGE

Over the morning announcements, Mr. Joseph Fetty introduced two new rules, spawning a controversy that would last until year's end. The first rule declared that no student could wear hats or bandanas. Some were outraged, saying, "What gives the school the right to start a dress code?" Others shrugged and forgot in a few days.

The next rule caused a worse storm: anyone with a hickey would receive half a day of suspension. Students now accused the school of trying to judge morality. The main disapproval of this rule came when it was seemingly not enforced by any teachers or administrators. Students realized what they could get away with. Some were amused to think who would have been suspended.

Senior Steve Vance asked for the privilege for sweet revenge and answered with a pie for Mr. Gary Young.

Do you think the rules against bandanas and hickies are unfair?

"Personally, I think bandanas are tacky. As for hickies, what people do in their personal life is their own business, but it shouldn't be displayed in school."

Krysta Lyle, junior

"Yes! It shouldn't be any of their (administrators') business what people do on their free time. It's your body; they shouldn't care. What next, uniforms?"

Carrie Mayer, sophomore

JUNIORS RULE IN VOLLEYBALL

Competition between classes was always present, but it came out into the open one day in October. Shouting students packed the gym; posters and signs lined the walls. The atmosphere was electric, even before the team came out onto the court. Today, students witnessed the struggle between classes for respect and domination. It was the day of the all-school volleyball game.

In its second year, this Student Council event promoted not only fun and class spirit, but good sportsmanship, as well. There was plenty of excitement, too. Points were awarded according to the spirit shown by each class; not to the winner of the match.

The battle was waged for an afternoon. The freshmen upset the sophomores in these games, while the juniors easily demolished the seniors in two. In the final match, the freshmen fought hard, but lost in the end to the juniors.

Donna Dovichi shows more than just talent in her "Creative Arts" routine with stylish acrobatics.

"I was shocked. I didn't believe it," remarked Chris Wittgren. On November 10, Chris was voted Cedar Lake's 1985 Junior Miss. "It took a while to sink in."

But Chris said she did not enter the contest to win, noting, "I wanted to get to know the other girls better."

Chris was not the only winner. All 17 contestants benefited from the experience. To them, it was a chance to get to know everyone, work together and have fun.

"Everyone wants to win," Jill Haddon said, "I went out just mainly to have fun and because I looked forward to it in my senior year."

The seniors offered some very qualified candidates. Everyone had a chance to claim the title, but some were in it just for the fun. "It was hard work, but we had fun," remarked Lydia Rivera. "We all had a good time and enjoyed ourselves."

"Down Memory Lane" was the theme for the ninth annual Jaycee-sponsored pageant. It was dedicated to Mia Johnson, 1984 Cedar Lake Junior Miss, who was killed in a car-train accident June 30. Serving as 1984 Junior Miss,

Debbie Epperson commented, "There will always be a memory."

Competition was based on five categories: Pose and Appearance, Youth Fitness, Spirit of Junior Miss, Creative Arts, and Scholarship Achievement.

Donna Dovichi won the Youth Fitness and Poise and Appearance awards. Sandi Fitch was honored for her Scholarship Achievement. First runner-up Melissa Staples was voted Spirit of Junior Miss. Cedar Lake's 1985 Junior Miss Chris Wittgren also won in the Creative Arts category with her dramatic interpretation from "The Gift."

WHO QUIET SENIORS SURPRISE

For days before the event, tension filled the halls, readying the students to witness one of the bitterest rivalries in Hanover's history. Posters materialized; some thanks to handy computer work by Mr. Fetty. The banners declared "Faculty Kicks," hardly what one expects from a respectful administrator. In a few days, mysterious vandals marked the posters with "respectful" replies (the respect being for the teachers' age): "Faculty Kicks Geritol." It was not difficult to conclude that National Honor Society's annual Senior/Faculty basketball game was quickly approaching.

The seniors took a new strategy against the faculty: a calm approach, different from past years in that they were not planning the smash the decrepit teachers all over the gym floor. Their announcements were subtle hints that even though the seniors might not win, the game would be a duel to witness and remember.

Student team coaches Paul Steuer and Rick Beck steady the hoop as Scott Derunz leads the seniors onto the floor for pre-game warm-ups.

On the contrary, the faculty gathered their threats into one final poem by the infamous poet, Mr. John Gorball, on the day of the battle. Although the competitors were not at each others' throats for weeks before, upon entering the gym on March 29, the rivalry was at the peak.

Coached by veteran varsity basketball players Paul Steuer and Rick Beck, the seniors fiercely charged into battle, surprising the crowd by keeping the game close to the end. The faculty (with no coaches coaching, but two on the team) found the seniors a fiesty opponent.

The final score was 77-71, the faculty remaining victorious for another year. But the whole feeling of the game was summed up in Bob Beck's last second, full-court shot that went in a moment after the buzzer. The seniors never gave up.

Framed by opponents, Mr. Dick Norris sinks two of the 77 points tallied by the teachers in the National Honor Society-sponsored game.

Jack Schuring plays the seniors' version of defense on Mr. Arden Smith, but the senior defense was just 6 points too loose.

Veteran faculty team member Mr. James Nicholas reaches over and on the back of a senior opponent to rebound for his victorious team.

Senior Pat Sawaska had only the hand of Coach Royce McDougall between him and two points. He did manage to hit the shot.

WHAT? HOMECOMING PROSE

Tony and Tom bring the crowd cheering on during the drawing competition.

Seniors led by Bob Winland, Melissa Staples, and Tom Urbanec tug with their teammates to a championship.

The junior class theory for a Homecoming basketball victory called for continuous flushing the Red Devils.

In a new event, Sandi Fitch helps the Class of '85 to a third-place finish in the flipper race.

Rick Vuksanovic leads the chug-a-lug pack with Ed Kraga close behind. Barb McKeever and Bob Beck can't catch up.

Although it was fun, Beth Shreve and Michelle Croak couldn't keep the freshmen from losing in the semifinals.

Senior Joe Perel gets help from Jill Hadden in cleaning up after being force-fed dessert in the pie throw

The junior and senior classes combined to pay $52 for the privilege of "owning" Mr. Steven Landis as their slave.

Yearbook advisor Mr. Mike Frazier takes sweet revenge on former staff member Ed Kubiak in the pie throw. "I really enjoyed it," Mr. Frazier said.

Some people volunteered to put their own faces into pies, as Heather Beck comes up for air in the pie eating contest.

Just another Monday . . . or is it? The halls did not look like this on Friday. Streamers interwoven across the ceiling and sweep down the walls. Posters line the walls, proclaiming a victory over the Devils. Witty slogans like "Wildcats rushed — Devils flushed" catch the eye and snickering approval flows through the halls. Several are illustrated with anything from Christmas trees to toilets. But strange decorations were not the only oddity; dress-up days were most popular.

On Monday the school looked more like an unemployment office than a school. Most every occupation was represented, even the mundane housewife. Tuesday filled the classrooms with many pairs: "Twinkies," as they were called.

Although this has never been an athletic school, on Wednesday the sportsmen turned out en masse. Joggers ran the halls and a fisherman was caught casting into one of Mr. Krof's fish tanks.

Thursday's celebration was so popular that local radio stations announced the Nerd invasion. Along with all the nerds came the usual nerd romances and nerd traumas. Blue and red were the prominent colors on Friday. From leg warmers to make-up, anything in Cardinal Red and Columbia Blue was worn to school.

The Student Council slave auctions did not bring in as much as previous years, but Mr. Landis made up the difference when he was sold to the junior and senior classes for $52.

As festivities ended Friday night, the juniors rejoiced. In a week of fun and excitement, they earned the time-honored Spirit Jug. Their ability to turn oddity into spirit was superior.

The losers merely grumbled that it just came naturally to the juniors.

WHAT A PROM TO PLEASE ALL

Months before were spent preparing for it. For many girls, it was the biggest event of the year: a chance to dress up and go out with a new romance or a good friend. For some boys, it was a chance to uselessly spend money on a girl and wear an uncomfortable tuxedo. But, believe it or not, boys did enjoy Prom. Prom was many things to many people, but all agree it was fun.

Sponsored by the Class of '86, Prom '85 was held at the After Four Club. The theme was "Almost Paradise" with music by Equinox. The band was special because one of its singers was freshman Cheryl Siewecki in her second gig with Equinox. Joe Paral was selected to serve as Prom King while Cathy Hoeckelberg was the lovely queen.

WHAT? A MUSICAL QUESTION

When band or choir is mentioned, the question comes up as to whether they are academic classes or extra-curricular activities. Both can be taken for credit, so students in most band or choir groups are required to earn their grades. Pep band members, however, earn no credits.

But many people refuse to accept music classes as equals to math or even home economics courses. It is true that many people are in music just to get an "easy grade," but that is true of some courses in nearly every academic area. Others only see a purpose in music if the bands or choirs prove themselves in area competitions, which they do.

So, when The KEY asked students about this mild controversy, you answered.

Are band and choir important classes or extra activities?

"If you are going to go on in music, it's an important class. If you're in it to have an easy class, it's extra-curricular."

Mandy Xanders, junior

"I'm not in either, but if you like band and choir, it's important to you."

Jason Kellerman, sophomore

"Extra activities. You really don't need them. Band and choir are there if you want them."

Ericka Kallies, freshman

"Both. I have to put extra time into choir, but it's still a class."

Scott Deruntz, senior

WHAT THE CLIMATE FIGURES

Math was practical. How else would someone figure out how much the school lunch was over-priced? But many found math difficult. Success depended on an accumulation of knowledge: all things learned in one year continued into the next. Business required not only knowledge of math, but an ability to organize that information into accounts, returns, and budgets.

Beyond the required, math and business were not just work. To find out what really went on in these classes, The KEY asked:

What was the funniest moment in your class?

"In Consumer Ed., the (junior high lunch) bell rang as usual and the clock in Mrs. Jarrett's class buzzed. She thought it was a fire drill and sent us outside. When we returned she was still in the room. She told us she was only worried about herself because she had pneumonia and she couldn't go out in the rain. (She was going to hide in the closet.)"

WHY DOESN'T TIME FLY?

What would life be like if there were no telephones? What if there was no way to write? What if there was no way to talk or communicate? When sitting in an English class, staring at the clock, watching the minute hand move like the hour hand, no one stops to realize that without English, or any language, there would be no communication. Without some form of it, there could be no interaction or exchange of ideas. It also helps make impressions on others, especially when applying for a job.

Thespians and Drama are extensions of English. They involve an indirect communication; from the actor, through a character in a play, to the audience. Actors must communicate not just single thoughts, but feelings to achieve an effect. They must also use every aspect of Thespians Shawn Sheehy, Jacalyn Sheehy, and Mike Milawowski prepare for an intense moment in the fall/winter play "Rehearsal for Murder."

English. To understand their characters, they must be able to comprehend implied emotions in dialogue; to present their characters they must be able to speak in front of a group.

The Thespian Troupe had one of its better years, presenting two plays to the largest audiences yet. The fall/winter play, "Rehearsal for Murder" was not a typical murder mystery. It was set in a theater, so it required minimal sets. Complex lighting provided the atmosphere, such as blue lights for flashback scenes. The spring musical, "Oliver!" was innovative because half the cast was junior high students, including the lead role. That role was filled by two boys, Tom Campbell and Brian Freeman; each getting to do one evening performance.

WHERE?

SEEKING INSPIRATION

A silvery moon looks over a warm night. The birds are all resting atop the tropical forest's trees. The trees are cascaded with the vine growths entangled in its many branches. The lake looks not at itself but reflects the picture around it.

What is this you might ask? This is what a student would normally see on display while casually walking down the hall. Where is this done? This happens to be an every day assignment in art. Classes vary in that some do the human skeleton; others an unsuspecting student's sneaker. Students learn about certain types of pictures and learn about different famous artists.

Year after year the teachers think of new things to build, draw, and make.

There are always new ideas flowing in an art room. Each idea is an original from a individual's imagination. How do they get some of the ideas for a new creation?

On April 30, the top 20 calendar sales people were awarded with a trip to the Chicago Art Institute. Mrs. Sharon Cataldi's main goal was that of inspiration and fascination. For an hour and half the group went with Mrs. Cataldi for explanations of some of the exhibits. For an hour later, the students were free to explore on their own. A trip like this will not be easily forgotten, but will live on in their art work.

WHEN BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

For a while, it seemed that the annual yearbook dance was not going to be held. As if fate was playing a dirty trick (with the help of the 1984 KEY staff), the yearbooks were not received until early February. Not a day went by that a staffer was not asked "When will the yearbooks be in?" Several tentative dates were set for the dance, only to fall through because the books failed to arrive or because bad weather arrived instead.

But they did finally arrive and the dance was held after the Hanover/Morgan Twp. basketball game in the back gym. Music was provided by disc jockey Dave Watt. At last students could pick up and sign their yearbooks. And, of course, many had to sort through the pile of old pictures to find all the embarrassing ones of themselves.

WHILE GOING BACK TO BASICS

Where could a sophomore boy learn to get that stubborn pizza stain out? In Home Economics, all students learned helpful skills from cooking pies to making a shirt. It went farther: one learned about nutrition and how to prepare different foods. Crafts, like rug making and sewing pillows, could help in time of need. In October, Mrs. Jean Kirk organized a field trip to Jewel. At this food store, classes learned about pricing and how to select produce and meat. After leaving Jewel, everyone stopped at McDonald's and had lunch, an important consumer activity.

In physical education classes, students learned about the physical needs of their bodies. This tied in with Home Ec; often taken with Phys Ed. While learning about physical and nutritional needs remained important for a healthy life, some students did not think so when they had to run around the gym four or five times a day (as required in one class).

Calisthenics were also a part of the teachers' warm-up routine. From tennis for boys to gymnastics for girls, the variety gave everyone a chance to find their strong sport. For the sake of those not athletically inclined, grades were based on participation. One six-weeks grade was based on classroom work where students learned about their bodies' needs and how to obtain enough exercise and good food.

WHO GROUPS WANT YOU

The increased requirements by the state to take more math and science limited the number of options for students who could otherwise take more electives, such as several years of foreign language.

Foreign language, for this school, meant Spanish and there were mixed opinions as to whether one year of Spanish was worth it. No one disputed the value of learning a second language.

Some simply believed a single year allowed them to barely scratch the surface of the language. Others thought there was more to it than that. "It's more important to learn about the people behind the language," said Lynette Urbanski, a sophomore in her first year of Spanish.

One thing that the students did agree on was that there should be, if only one, other languages offered. Although Spanish is useful, other dialects, such as French or German, could be more of an asset in certain college majors or occupations. Unfortunately, such courses would face the problem that all elective classes already had: competing for the students' time.

While there was a growing interest in languages, chess players were among a more rare breed. They met in sponsor Mr. Eugene Rajchel's room at lunch. While snacking on their lunch, they enjoyed challenging their minds with this game of logic. Concentration showed on their faces as they decided what move to take against their opponent to take the game. The group worked hard, just missing a chance to compete in the state meet, but their legions were few.

Know anyone with the ability to talk any Boy Scout out of his Eagle Badge? The speech team had an opening for such a find. The speech team, as the name says, competed using verbal skills. How well could someone come across when giving a speech? Could he compete against others in a debate? The competition was strenuous.

WHAT'S SOCIAL UPS & DOWNS

Social studies from books was one thing, but putting it to work was quite another.

As the most productive student organization, Student Council faced a tough year with some small problems involving unsuccessful projects and uncooperative people. They tried to sponsor extra dances to appease the student cry for more dances. Unfortunately, there were complications over the lack of chaperones and a disc jockey.

"The biggest problem was that there were many personality conflicts and a lot of seniors quit and left us with a very small group," stated council member Jocelyn Sheehy. Surviving the conflicts, they sponsored two outstanding projects: Blood Drive and Students Against Drunk Drivers (SADD).

What decent, respectable vampire would miss Student Council's annual Blood Drive in April? They hid in the corners and behind chairs as students, teachers, and other adults donated 135 usable pints of blood; 40 over their goal. Daring were 53 who faced the needle for the first time.

A project with more direct, long-term effects on the lives of students was the formation of SADD, a national organization seeking to end the deaths of teenagers due to drunk driving. At the prom goers meeting, SADD passed out contracts for kids and their parents to sign saying that if the teen did drink, the parent would go get him, no questions asked.

Learning about culture in America's Wild West, "Indian" Met Whitacre and "cowboy" Rob Henn demonstrate a period dance with their classmates.

Mr. Greg Whitacre selects an appropriate song for "Wild West Days" in U.S. History while Dave Uran awaits a turn to perform.

Without enough frogs for each person, Mary Mudy, Mike Randall, and Curt Giacolona share the parts and their findings.

Humor is one of Mr. Robert Krol's trademarks in lecturing his classes. Student Dan Wells seeks to understand the lecture or the joke.

WHAT? LIFE & DEATH ANSWERS

Governor Robert Orr's answer to excellence in science education was greeted with "ick" and "yuk" by biology students who involuntarily found themselves in front of dismantled frogs and cross-sectioned worms. Most took the queasy curriculum in stride, since they didn't have much choice. Those with an avid interest, however, joined the Science Club, sponsored by Mr. Robert Krol. Their interests turned from "dead things" to living creatures as they traveled to Chicago's Brookfield Zoo on several occasions and collected aluminum cans and newspapers for recycling and as a fund raiser.

Mike Szwicki waits for science class to end. Hanover students began taking more science since the state increased the minimum requirements.

Part of the dissection process requires Shay Vance to chart and identify the various organs found inside her frog.

WHEN? WAITING FOR THE PAY OFF

When did keeping that 3.5 grade average pay off? In March. That's when the National Honor Society held its annual induction of new members. Ten students (two seniors and eight juniors) met the qualifications and passed review by a board of five teachers and administrators. They joined a group of 18 in various projects around the school, including the "Someone You Should Know," Senior Faculty Basketball Game, and the upkeep of the courtyard.

Only two nights a year find the academic rewarded: National Honor Society Induction and Honors Night. Though both allow the students to be recognized and honored for their achievements, is it unfair that athletes have three nights that they are rewarded? Some argue that many more awards are given out at Awards Night than at any sports banquet. But should not the academic honors receive more attention? The KEY asked and you answered to the question:

Which kind of award means more: academic or sports?

"Academic. Later on in life, it proves more about you. It takes much more work to get an academic award — an award in Algebra — than to get an award in track for running around in circles."

Tammy Wittenhagen, junior

EDITOR'S NOTE

The KEY staff regrets that the pictures for Honors Night and the National Honor Society Induction were not taken due to photographer error. Both events are extremely important in the academic lives of Hanover students and should be recognized as such. The band photos were used because they were the most appropriate pictures available for these pages.

After the Ernests' turn, Tony Sain and his parents share the spotlight as the band recognizes the veteran members.

WHAT? IN SEARCH OF REWARD

When is your job the most rewarding?

"When I see students' attitudes and grades improve because of my helping them with work or because of the use of punishments to help them. I feel most rewarded when I see the new attitude."

Mr. Joseph Feltly, principal

"When I can help someone, even in a small way, and when I can see a benefit for both of us, it is rewarding to me."

Mrs. Elaine Edwards, secretary

"It is rewarding at that moment when I see a student suddenly understand a problem he has been struggling with. Since a teacher can't always be sure of when or if they reach every student, you have to be pleased when you can actually tell that a student understands — especially if they can appreciate it, too."

Mr. William Whlestine, business

"The contact with the students especially when they come back and see you and tell you how they're doing."

Mrs. Marion Heldt, guidance secretary

"Probably during the summer."

Mrs. JoAnne Gruber, nurse

"We don't get a chance to see our influence on students like teachers in a classroom. But it's rewarding when you can help a student who comes in to the office with a problem."

Mrs. Judy Lueder, bookkeeper

"Probably when I get a chance to sit down and talk to kids on a positive note.

In most cases, kids don't get to know me in a positive way. When someone walks through my door, I usually wonder what they've done wrong now."

Mr. David Lemon, assistant principal

"Teaching, for me, is rewarding when students recognize their own achievements, then try to build on it. If they learn to solve a problem, even a small one, that is an achievement, and should be recognized. Teachers and students operate in an environment of criticism, so I try to recognize that, collectively, small accomplishments are just as important as major achievements. I try to be demanding and when the results are positive, that makes teaching worthwhile."

WHAT YEAR 'ROUND FAVORITES

What is your favorite part of the school year?

"Summer, of course!! Everything is alive and colorful. Also, you can successfully shoot cats without the worry of freezing to death first."

Mr. Jack Granger, Spanish

"I enjoy the colorful, cool fall. The sky, the leaves, and the animals all contribute to the beauty of the scene. It isn't too cold yet; the heat of summer is over and the mud of Spring is dry. School also is off to a colorful new beginning."

Mr. Gary Young, English

"The beginning of the school year. It holds the feeling of new promise and the new people makes that the best of the year for me."

Mr. Robert Krol, science

"I enjoy second semester — Spring is almost here! I enjoy teaching my new classes, especially high school clothing."

Mrs. Jean Kirk, home economics

"I enjoy meeting parents during parent-teacher conference. It's nice to meet the parents of students when there isn't a particular problem. So, when you do need to talk with them, both of you know each other."

Mrs. Ruth Eskilson, home economics

WHAT? SENIORS? NOSTALGIA

What will you remember most about high school?

"My girlfriend, Michelle. Her and Swing Choir."

Eryck Pearson, senior

"Sports. I have a lot of trophies to remind me and I have a pretty good scrapbook going."

Cheryl Litchfield, senior

"Good times in Mr. Brindley's fifth hour Honors History class: 'Fearsome Foursome'."

Patrick Sawaska, senior

"Basketball, Junior Miss. That and Girls' State. If we (varsity girls' basketball team) win sectionals, I'll remember that, too."

Chris Wittgren, senior

"Nothing."

Tom Kretz, senior

"All the fun I had with my friends."

Kathy LaVelle, senior

"I will remember all the hard work that it took for the girls' basketball team to win our first PCC, but I think it was worth it."

Jill Haddon, senior

"I'll remember having to struggle to get out of bed on a Wednesday morning when it's pitch black out and my body hurts, but I kept endeavoring on..."

WHAT<sup>SENIOR</sup> FEELINGS MIXED

What do you think of when someone mentions the graduation?

"There's a good feeling inside because you get out of school. A feeling of sadness because you're leaving all your friends. It seems just a few years ago you were getting into kindergarten."

Chris Fink, senior

"Basically, the graduation gives me a feeling of both fear and excitement. You have to start all over again in college. You have to go into the real world now."

Sandi Fitch, senior

"It's going to be the end of our lives and opening the door to a whole new chapter of our lives. I'm going to miss all the old times and things. I have a lot of mixed feelings."

Steve Vanco, senior

"Leaving my friends, future plans, and stuff like that."

Beth Morden, senior

"I think that there will be some sadness there at the ceremony because it will be the last time to see some friends, but there will mostly be a lot of excitement because we will be starting a new life."

WHAT JUNIORS TIME DECISIONS

With two years of high school to go, juniors became the middlemen. They could not be as crazy as seniors or as serious as freshmen. Most tried to juggle extra-curricular activities with a job, not to mention regular homework.

Some were successful, while others struggled with the responsibility. Some juniors were already thinking of college or making plans for after graduation. But not all juniors were the intellectual type.

Another big junior concern was their social lives. Where to go? What can we do? New drivers' licenses were exercised regularly to take advantage of later curfews. They quickly discovered new places to go and things to do.

We asked the Class of '86 about their biggest junior-year concerns and they answered:

Newel Anderson
Brian Asche
Brian Baacke
Sean Barney
Dawn Bartolac

Brenda Bernhard
Karen Blbruck
Scott Bocock
Sherrice Boston
Pam Burkhardt

John Carey
Cassie Caston
Ed Clark
Ronald Clemons
David Coburger

Jennifer Cochran
Anita Coffman
Barbara Corbett
David Corey
Lisa Cox

Kelly Crowley
Kevin Crowley
Colleen Davis
Rob Dayberry
Jeff Dell

What are you most concerned about and what do you spend the most time on?

"I spend the most time on homework (and) the plays. I'm most concerned about college, probably."

Sue Shroka, junior

"I'm mostly concerned about being around people who I can really talk to. I would guess my spare time would be concentrated on going to games or, as any junior would do, study."

Sean Barney, junior

Giving their best tug, the juniors still could not win the tugging war, but they did go on to win the Spirit Jug.

WHAT JUNIORS ENTERTAIN

A new driver's license, a tank of gas, and old friends didn't always add up to trouble for juniors. So, we asked them:

How do you have good clean fun?

"Go out to the movies or for pizza. Then after that, we just go out driving around and stuff."

Cassie Casten, junior

"I go dancing with my friends. I love going to Chicago and just bumming around."

Jayna Foust, junior

"I don't. How can one have good clean fun in today's world?"

Mark Mayer, junior

"Go out with friends from my youth group and do different things."

Karen Bilbruck, junior

"By getting crazy and having a bunch of friends with you. Going roller skating or going to parties, too."

Sherreco Boston, junior

"I work with the handicapped on Friday nights. I feel very rewarded by helping these less fortunate people."

Dawn Stelow, junior

"I go to the arcade in the mall and play some 'Dragon's Lair.' "

Dave Petros, junior

Carl Moore, a varsity wrestler, takes a good look at his North Newton opponent.

Rob Hens, Paul Steuer, and Mel Whitkaneck, stretch out before the Lowell Invitational varsity cross country meet.

WHO

SOPHS TRY TO FIT IN

Ignored for the most part by juniors and seniors, sophomores found they were "too old" for younger freshmen.

So, sophomores tried to come up with new ideas to fit in better. Yet, in spite of a few extra-curricular activities and occasional parties, it was tough to get socially "established." This wasn't always true, but most tenth graders ended up in small groups of their own, talking only to people with good reputations.

Since music provided a common bond, The KEY asked sophomores:

What is your favorite musical group?

"I don't have just one; DePeche Mode, D2, Tears for Fears, Human League, Nick Kershaw."

Jenai Stocking, sophomore

"Van Halen, Sammy Hagar."

WHAT?

SOPHS DEVELOP FREE TIME

While it took a year as freshmen to learn the ropes, sophomores began to emerge as "real people." Some even developed normal habits. That is, when The KEY asked, these sophomores answered:

How do you spend your free time?

"I practice breakdancing and partying."

Scott Beck, sophomore

Jeff Walls, sophomore

"Going to the mall and spending my parents' money."

Peggy Endris, sophomore

"Doing homework after school, but my free time I like to be with my friends."

Jayne Bilbruck, sophomore

"I spend a lot of time with my girl friend. I also spend a lot of time on sports, like basketball, especially in the summer."

Mark Gruenhagen, sophomore

"I like to go to Club Soda in Hammond with my friends."

How did you try to fit in better?

"I didn't."

Don LaTulip, sophomore

"Be nice to people."

Colleen Werner, sophomore

"Being a part of the executive committee of the Science Club."

Cheryl Massengill, sophomore

"By being active in sports."

Mike Brady, sophomore

WHO? FRESHMEN SEEK RESPECT

Juniors and seniors never noticed them in the halls. Sophomores might have known a few, but didn't want to show it. The only ones who respected them were the junior high students.

They never do too well in Spirit Week and rarely appear on varsity teams. Misconceptions about high school have plagued them for years, as well as older brothers and sisters.

But freshmen were a precious resource to the school. They were honor students, athletes, actors, and future student body.

Everyone was a freshman once, and maybe remembers how it felt. As low men on the totem pole, The Key wanted to know how the freshmen felt this year, so we asked and they answered.

Is high school what you expected?

"It's not a whole lot different from junior high, but you are more privileged."

Karen Bainbridge, freshman

"It's just like starting junior high all over again."

Terry Panice, freshman

"I thought it would be hard and it is."

W [H]AUNTS FRESHMEN

Do you, as a freshman, feel included in school spirit?

"Yes, but the upperclasses' attitudes toward freshmen could be better, especially in sports."

Chris Dixon, freshman

"Yes, but the freshman cheerleaders try to get people to go to games and no one does."

Michelle Croak, freshman

"No, lots of them (freshmen) just sit there and don't cheer."

Shanon Mulvihill, freshman

"Yes, we're included in Spirit Week and just as many freshmen are on teams as other grades."

Melissa Holman, freshman

"Sure, but I don't feel included in a team unless it's a freshman one."

LouAnne Gilkey, freshman

"Yes, because you become part of it when you participate in sports."

HOW FILLING FAMILY SHOES

Does it help or harm to have an older brother or sister who has had the teacher before?

"Nobody ever says anything about my sister."

Tammy Sheehy, freshman

"It helps. You know the teachers more and they've heard about you and know what to expect."

Cheryl Swiecki, freshman

"I don't think it helps, because I'm not anything like my brother."

Kris Sharp, freshman

"Harms. They expect you to be the same, like being real smart."

The Key

The 400-meter run asks a lot of the body as Mike Piepho and Sean Barney pass a LaCrosse runner.

The girls varsity basketball team found all the right answers as they won the 1985 Parter County Conference Tournament title in January.

HANOVER HARRIERS NEAR POTENTIAL

Coordinating everyone to run at their full potential is not easy. Cross country is an unpredictable sport in this way, but the results are not always bad. At 11-4, Hanover's runners achieved the school's second best dual meet record.

When a team does well there is something being done right.

"Our team improved with each member," said Paul Steuer, the team's number two runner. "The addition of freshman Sam Goff definitely helped our team. Coach Strawbridge helped much more in his second year. He pushed us much further than last year."

Having a few seniors on the team really helped for coaching other runners and setting examples. Some say seniors make the team. But according to Coach Strawbridge, this was a total team effort. He will also have a good nucleus of seniors again next year as Mel Whitkanack, Rob Henn, and Skip Harmon return.

Did you reach your full potential as a cross country runner?

"One can always give more than one did. We did learn to reach some of our potential, but not full potential."

Paul Steuer, senior

"We gave the sport our best effort no matter what the conditions were."

Joe Parat, senior

VICTORY GETS NEW MEANING

Dani Nolan expressed the team motto at the first volleyball pep session: "There is no 'I' in team." No matter how it was said, the girls' varsity volleyball team was at its best ever.

"They played as a unit for two years before," said Coach Carol Grady. "That made the difference." With six seniors to guide them, the team had the right combination to end with a 24-8 record, not to mention the third PCC Tourney title in a row.

"We wanted to go undefeated in the round-robin," stated Coach Grady, but the girls tied for first place when Morgan edged them in the final PCC match of the season. Still, as team member Jocelyn Sheehy said, "It was a new experience for Hanover."

One of the greatest accomplishments for the team was placing second in the Griffith Tourney. "The team may disagree, but it showed that we could compete with the big schools," explained Coach Grady.

What was the team's greatest strength?

"Our potential and ability. If we really put our minds to something, we could accomplish it."

Cheryl Litchfield, senior

A very versatile player, Jodie Uran expertly passes the ball to the setter to start the attack in their win over Westville.

Girls' Varsity Volleyball Team: (Front): Melissa Staples, Jodie Uran, Jill Haddon, Cheryl Litchfield, Daria Simmons, and Cathy Hoeckelberg. (Back): Patty Ernest, manager; Virginia Foreman, Jocelyn Sheehy, Patty Tomaszewski, Mandy Xanders, Dani Nolan, Vicki Young and Coach Carol Grady.

Where do varsity players come from? Natural talent is rarely found, but even when it is, it needs to be developed. JV teams served for not only this purpose, but showed that underclassmen could play volleyball, too.

"It was an excellent team, with the best season ever," stated girls' coach Ann Thompson. Over half the team was composed of freshmen who "knew very little, but by the end of the year could compete with the sophomores." The girls ended with an 8-0 conference record and 16-7 overall. It was the best JV girls record ever.

Showing some strength, Tom Urbanec leaps off the ground and slams ball to a surprised Washington Twp. opponent, as the 'Cats take game two, 15-3.

WHERE JV FUELS VARSITY FIRE

The boys were off to a slow start, but "improved the last two weeks of the season," remarked Coach Mike Frazier. "Nobody would have believed that Hanover would have played as well as they did in the PCC. We earned our spot in the playoffs. I was extremely pleased." With a tourney record of 7-4, the JV showed a spark of its own.

Why is it important to have JV teams?

"A JV team is essential for a winning varsity team. It prepares you for the competition at a higher level."

Denny Cokenour, sophomore

"Without a JV team, students wouldn't be prepared to withstand the overpowering performance of a varsity team."

As a spike flies over the net from the opposition, ready Dave Uran tries to save it by diving for the ball.

Already in position, Jack Schuring and Dave Uran boost the defense by attempting to block a dangerous spike and prevent the kill.

As his teammates get into position for a return, Jack Schuring leads the attack with a strong spike into Hebron's blockers.

YOUNG VARSITY HAS BUILDING YEAR

With more failures than victories, the boys' varsity volleyball team found that it was more a year to grow than win matches. Coach Carol Grady summed-up the 0-8 record by saying, "It was a frustrating season for both me, as a coach, and for the team."

Shawn Sheehy referred to it as a "building season." What hurt the team the most was the inexperience and youth of the players. "There were individuals who made progress. They learned a lot and that will help next year," said Coach Grady.

What was the highlight of your season?

"Although we didn't have a winning season, the team had a good time."

Shawn Sheehy, senior

"We had a perfect season."

Eryck Pearson, senior

"Maybe next year."

WILDCATS SPIRIT FOR OTHERS' BENEFIT

What is the best part of being involved in cheerblock, pep band, pom pons?

"It is rewarding helping players and giving pep to students."

Michelle Croak, freshman

"I enjoy it. It's hard work, but it's worth it. The students seem to like it, too."

Cheryl Sawyer, junior

"It adds to the spirit of the game. As the name says, it's 'Pep Band.' "

WHY VARSITY BOYS 'PUZZLED'

In sports, the elements of a team are like pieces of a puzzle. Rarely is an ultimately successful year in sports followed because the pieces are never the same. Though a spark of hope remained, no one expected the boys varsity basketball team to repeat their surprising feat of '83-'84. But the Wildcats did not completely disappoint; they finished a competitive season with a record at .500. Having lost five tough seniors from last year as crucial pieces of the team puzzle, the underclassmen had to fill in. The team had only four veteran seniors: Paul Steuer, Larry Glidewell, Brian Henson, and Rick Beck. Three sophomores filled in the blanks: Mark Gruenhagen, Bob Briggs, and Mike Holobawski.

According to senior Paul Steuer, the main team main goal was to "play both offense and defense as a team." At times, the strong pieces to the puzzle fit together, pulling the team to a victory. A main piece was Bob Kubiak, averaging 18 points and 12 rebounds a game. It was obviously a year for individual and team improvements, building a promising group for next year. The important aspect is not necessarily the pieces to the puzzle, but how they fit together.

WHAT PIECES FIT INTO PLACE

In any sport, many parts must be put together to form the complete picture: a whole, winning team. Even when the parts are there, they do not always fall together.

It was not quite that for the boys junior varsity; some of the pieces were missing. Confidence is important; but a lack of confidence could have been a major reason for losing games. The players had to deal with the fact that their opponents usually had more experience.

"They (opponents) had mostly juniors which counts for more experience. Having all sophomores and freshmen, we needed more time just playing," commented Coach Royce McDougall.

The highlight of the season was the PCC tourney. Even though they did not win the final game, the team played their best during the tourney. The final game was lost by only three points. "But they were three good games," said Coach McDougall.

Overall, the season was a disappointment to the team. "When looking back, I felt that at times, they played well. Lack of consistency was our weak point; the season ended on a positive note, though."

Have you ever made an amazing shot, one that seemed to defy the laws of nature?

"In the eighth grade, I made two free throws in a row to put the game into overtime against St. Michael's."

WHAT'S

FROSH NEVER SAY DIE

Compared to the other basketball teams, the freshman team was quite different. It faced problems that are almost the opposite of the JV and varsity teams, but are no easier to solve. The coach had to adapt to a different group each year. Success was measured not in the number of games won, but in how much the team grew.

It is difficult to judge each season's team because each year provides a new group to coach. Coach Frank Kwasny said, "The rules allow for only freshmen on the team, and maybe a sophomore if he is at a lower skill level. Each year we get different people at various skill levels."

The freshman year is considered a time to learn and grow in academics and sports. But with all the importance placed on athletics, it is hard to believe that any basketball team could be over-looked. But many students do not know that a freshman basketball team even exists. "It doesn't hurt the team," remarked Coach Kwasny. "The important thing is for the freshman basketball team to play as many games as they can." The team did get good experience and practice from 18 games and the Lowell tourney.

Despite their 2-16 record, the team showed promise. "They were tenacious and gutsy. Their attitude was 'never say die.'" "They had excellent basketball potential. With hard work, those skills can be developed," Coach Kwasny remarked.

FIGHTING SHADOWS OF DOUBT

Working with a team and striving to make it better is one of the endless quests that coaches go on. As soon as one problem is conquered, another one is around the corner. Coach Carol Grady felt that even though the junior varsity girls played more as a team, they needed to work on the fundamentals of basketball. "All year we had trouble in the third quarter," commented Miss Grady. To compensate, ten players were used every game. "Everyone was fresh and full of pep then," she said.

Another shadow around the corner was the team's inexperience. Considering the size and age, a season record of 10-8 was good. Nine out of ten players were freshmen, who had to learn the differences between junior high strategy and what they were to face now. "Because of older players on the other teams, we had to learn a more complex defense to keep up with their offense," said freshman Carolyn Xanders. With youth came a smaller size; the players ranged from 5'4" to 5'8". But they were able to fill in the gap between them and taller opponents by putting that space between their feet and the floor. Another ray of light, according to Coach Grady was that "we generally never got behind in a game."

WHAT GIRLS LIVE A DREAM

Having a dream come true is a chance of a lifetime. The varsity girls had that chance. Once their goal was set, there had to be dedication following it. No matter how much a practice hurt or how much sweat was poured, consistency was vital in making a PCC Tourney Championship dream a reality.

Practice for the tourney required sharpening shooting skills and concentration on plays. The dream of a championship was the underlying fuel to trudge on. Why was it so important to win the PCC? "Mostly, for the seniors we had, eight of them, and they really wanted to win because of it being their last year," said player Ginny Foreman. "It was important to win against Boone Grove because we had the ability."

When following a dream, the road is not always easy. "The last game in our PCC tourney was very frustrating. We knew we had the ability to beat our opponent, Boone Grove. Our team had the ability to win and we did," Foreman added.

After winning the PCC, every sore muscle and dreaded practice was forgotten. The discipline and thoroughness of their coach paid off with their victory. The varsity girls certainly showed it could be done with their determination.

And how did Coach Ann Thompson feel about all of this? A mysterious gorilla appeared in the cafeteria the week after the tourney to give the players balloons. This way, the school as well as the team shared in the congratulations.

Although Wheeler had position for this rebound, Wildcats Melissa Staples, Cathy Hoeckelberg, and Jill Haddon helped the team to their eleventh straight win and a place in the PCC Championship game against Boone Grove.

Already leading 13-0, sophomore sensation Jonny Willems pins South Newton's Doc Claussen at 1:34 in the second period. Willems finished the season with a 24-1 regular season record.

Sophomore Dan Back attempts to force his South Newton opponent to the mat. Hanover easily downed the Rebels, 60-16.

John Maleska, Skip Harmon, and Scott Campbell stretch before the Griffith match. Harmon won his match by a 12-8 decision.

John Willems attempts a figure four leg lock in the first period against Claussen from South Newton.

WHITACRE SUCCESS FOR GRAPPLERS

Wrestling is often overlooked due to the extensive knowledge needed to enjoy watching it. It is necessary to know the holds and the way of scoring to "get a grasp" on the sport. Also, it is not so obvious a team sport; it required knowledge of the individual wrestlers.

Being in a sport of individuals allows players to set their own goals and work at their own pace. Coach Greg Whitacre not only finds success just in a winning season for the team, but also in individual accomplishments. In November, sophomore John Willems was the first ever tournament champion. Each match adds points to the team's total; if a player does not win but accumulates some points, he is beneficial to the team. The team has improved greatly over past years. "We are becoming very competitive with the schools twice our size," remarked Coach Whitacre.

One of the grapplers' greatest setbacks was lack of support. It created a negative feeling about being a wrestler. Coach Whitacre commented, "At one time, we had about half a team — try playing basketball with three people." Practice attendance was poor, but those who showed up were determined to work. "The ones who show up and care are as dedicated and as good as kids in almost any other sports program anywhere," said Coach Whitacre.

What is the worst you have ever been hurt in a meet or practice?

"I ripped some muscles in my neck in a meet. I didn't have to go to a doctor because I'm a man, but it hurt."

HOMECOMING BETTER THAN EXPECTED

A cold mist hovered over the dew drenched grass as a pair of Nike running shoes pounded the black, barren asphalt track. Though the calendar exclaimed "April — SPRING!," the cloud that formed from exhaled breath whispered of cold.

Discarded sweats laid like forgotten flags along side the never-ending black path. The runners did not feel the cold, they felt only the blood pumping under their skin, into tightening muscles. Cold air flooded the lungs, each breath reaching deeper, yet finding less oxygen. The runner pushed on, knowing that if she let down her guard against fatigue, weakness would take over. Like a crack in a dam against water, a moment of uncertainty could cause a runner to lose a race. Concentration turned to finishing one more lap, one more sprint, reaching for that goal.

Seniors Cathi Hutzler and Melissa Staples reached a special goal by qualifying for sectionals. Cathi placed well, 10th in shot put, and missed a spot in the discus by a mere two inches. Freshmen created new hope and spirit on the team, too. Coach Carol Grady, noted their experience would make for a stronger team next year.

The worst meet was at Boone Grove. It was a loss that contributed to the rest of the season. The team simply did not perform to its full potential. The team agreed that they were not beaten, but destroyed. After a long talk in a team meeting and working out at more practices, they were ready to try again.

"Our best game was the meet right after the Boone Grove disaster, everyone met their goals or exceeded them," Coach Griday said. "This says a lot for our team. Finishing with their overall record of 9-5, and PCC at 5-3, Miss. Grady thought they did better than she expected."

Lining up for a sprint race, freshman DeAnn Hahn takes the first spot in front of Missy Holeman and Michelle Croak against Westville/LaCrosse.

Passing a Westville runner, Milly Willy and Lucinda Frye were two of the freshmen who contributed throughout the season.

Assigned to the outside lane against LaCrosse and Westville, junior Patty Tomaszewski heads down the backstretch on the Hanover track.

One of the easiest races of the year. Mike Piepho, Dan Becker, and Bob Briggs swept the first three places in the 300-meter hurdles when Kankakee Valley forfeited.

Junior Tom Wilkening takes the first throw on the new discus pad, east of the track. He also missed going to sectionals by just four inches.

Paul Steuer leads Ray Fleming, Mark Mayer, Dan Beck, and Craig Molden in a wide-open 800-meter run against LaCrosse and Westville.

WHAT BOYS IMPROVE WITH TOUGHER SEASON

Although it wasn't a remarkable season, there was, in the words of Coach Mike Frazier, "tremendous improvement." The team finished the season with a record of 6-8 in dual meets. When the Hanover and Lowell Relays are combined with that, the record improved to 12-11, a respectable mark.

The factors in the improvement are many. The year started with strenuous conditioning. According to Coach Frazier, "a person that has conditioned properly is less prone to injuries later in the year." Also important was the addition of an assistant coach, Mr. John Gorbali, who really helped with weight training and field events. Sophomore Jeff Milanowski stated, "I think the conditioning program was tough this year, but it got me in better shape for the beginning of the season."

Another factor was the experience of the team. Six seniors returned and stayed for most of the season. Although many team members improved greatly and several fell just short of qualifying for sectionals, two did not. Sophomores Ted Jenkins and Bob Briggs earned spots in the post-season meet. Jenkins turned-in a solid performance, pole vaulting 11'6", and just missing at 12'. Bob Briggs earned his spot by high jumping 5'10", but like many others, had trouble with his footing on a wet track at Highland High School.

Junior Mark Mayer received the "Most Improved" award at the Spring Sports Banquet. He was only four seconds from qualifying in the sectionals and just three seconds off the school record.

Other award winners were Ted Jenkins, Most Valuable Performer; and Sean Barney, Mental Attitude Award winner. Although the team loses many seniors, Coach Frazier said, "We may not have the team depth next year, but I look for several individuals to earn all-conference honors."

In just his first year, junior Sean Barney didn't take long to adapt to track and field competition. Sean earned the team's "Mental Attitude" honors for his efforts in high jump, long jump, 400-meter dash, and 1600-meter relay events.

WHEN BASEBALL TOUGHS IT OUT

Anyone waiting for the baseball team to win the state title or even have a .500 season had better plan to be around for a few more years. Although no one expected a miracle turn-around like the Chicago Cubs in 1984, that did not mean that the fans or the team gave up hope. With an idea of "never-say-die," the varsity baseball team won two games out of 23; a record not too bad considering what the team went through.

Poor weather and the lack of a field at the start of the year forced the team to practice inside. When the team took the field against Beecher for their first game of the year, it was the first time most of the players had been on a diamond all year. First baseman Dave Uran said because of the situation, "We were a little rusty over the first couple of games. We needed to be more consistent, make the easy plays, and not strike out as much."

Inexperience also plagued the team. "Out of 18 players, 12 did not play last year," remarked Coach Arden Smith. With only one senior (catcher Paul Thornsberry), the rest of the team was made up of five juniors, four sophomores, and two freshmen. Coach Smith also said that "the team's pitching was its strong point." And with most players returning, Wildcat fans, like Cubs fans can say "Wait 'till next year!"

The Golf Teams include Varsity (Front): John Foreman, Denny Cokonour, Newel Anderson, Rob Dayberry, and Coach John Brindley. Junior Varsity (Back): Jason Darnell, Ginny Foreman, Brett Casey, Dave Corey, Wayne Pyle, and Bob Van Houten.

Although years of practice and play help Newel Anderson as a varsity golfer, the ball still knows when to stop just short of the hole.

WHAT NATURE OF THE COURSE

Grass, sunshine, sand, water, trees, with a bit of walking. Think of the possibilities: lanes, exercise, growing individually, and learning new things. Could this be a sport? Yes, it is a surface view of golf.

What it does not show is the concentration, measuring, checking and, of course, total silence. Judging the slopes and distances was not easy, a steady hand and keen eye were required. Varsity golfer Rob Dayberry voiced that they were not ready at the beginning of the season. If they had been better prepared as a team, the record would have been better.

Having only 16 golfers at the beginning of the season, all of them underclassmen, it was hard to get them prepared. This squad featured just 12 members on both varsity and junior varsity. Considering the size of the team and the amount that each individual put in, the season was good.

Over the year the team steadily grew in knowledge of their sport. In the first matches, the varsity team's average was 204 strokes. Later it was 190. John Foreman held the best individual game with a three-over-par 38. While there was always room for athletic ability, golf took concentration on the nature of the course.

When the weather was good, golf team members like Rob Dayberry could actually enjoy practice as well as the matches, but Mother Nature didn't always cooperate.

WHO STUDENTS SPEAK CHANGE

Anyone who has ever been to an athletic banquet, whether as the athlete or with a brother or sister, knows that the main event besides the food are speeches by all the coaches. After a while, one discovers that each speech has one thing in common (other than sports): it does not mean much to anyone who was not on the team. Also agreed among students is that coaches sometimes get carried away.

The 1985 KEY went to find how students would solve that problem, so we asked and you answered:

If you were the coach, what would you say when presenting awards at the athletic banquets?

"I would say a few funny things about each player, talk seriously about the season for two minutes, and then give the awards. Like Miss Thompson, not Mr. Strawbridge."

Chris Wittgren, senior

"I would mention as many positive things about players as a team and as individuals. Also, I would share a couple of remember-whens to show spirit."

Sean Barney, junior

"I'd say as little as possible so as not to bore the people and to keep things short and simple."

Dave Petros, junior

"I wouldn't say anything at all because everyone would already be asleep from the coaches beforehand."

Cindy Grah, junior

Jodie Uran presents the 1985 PCC Round-Robin and Tournament trophies to Mr. Felt. This marked the first time Hanover has won both titles.

1985 Senior Athletes Awards were presented to Melissa Staples and Joe Paral. Staples is a three-sport athlete, while Paral claims two.

Baseball award winners included Vince Schuring, "Most Improved" award; Paul Thomsberry, "MVP" and "Mental Attitude" awards; Dave Uran for best hitting, and Brian Baacke for best pitching.

Top wrestling honors were given to Paul Metcalfe as "Most Improved," John Willems as "Most Valuable Wrestler," and John Matuska for "Mental Attitude."

The Class of 1985

COLOPHON: The 1985 KEY

Volume 18 of The KEY, Hanover Central High School's yearbook, was printed by Taylor Publishing Company, 1550 W Mockingbird Lane, Dallas, Texas.

Color photographs were reproduced from original and custom enlarged prints from Kodak Kodacolor VR 400 ISO film, processed by Root Photographers, Chicago, Illinois. Black and white photographs were reproduced from Kodak Tri-X Pan 400 ISO print film.

Group photographs and senior portraits were by Root Photographers of Chicago, Illinois. Underclass portraits were by Mr. Bruce Penrod of Interstate Studios, Crown Point, Indiana.

Yearbook printing was done on 80-pound, white enameled stock paper. Trim size is 7 1/2 by 10 1/2 inches. Binding was Smyth sewn, rounded and backed. Spot color in the Opening and Student Life sections were reproduced in Taylor's Azure Satin at 100% density. Endsheets were printed in Taylor's Maroon 034, screened at 70%.

Large headlines were set in 60-point Helvetica Outline Italic. Small headlines were set in 24-point Helvetica Bold Condensed Italic. Body copy and folio copy were set in 10-point Helvetica Condensed, set solid. Captions were set in 8-point Helvetica Condensed Italic, set solid. Logo and divider page headlines were set in 48 point and 24-point Greg Swash transfer lettering manufactured by TransferTech. Diagonal background art was produced using TransferTech A 133 and A 136 patterns.

Cover design was reproduced using white Durolith base material. Colors include Taylor's Maroon 034 and thermoscreen process in Blue 006.

The press run totaled 240 books of 128 pages, scheduled for delivery in October, 1985.

After delivering his speech, Shawn Sheehy returns to his seat with the other 87 graduating members of the Class of 1985

With just a few more moments of high school remaining, Darla Simmons says good-bye to her fellow classmates

Commencement runs smoothly because of another important "tradition" rehearsal, as Tom Kretz and Tom Urbanec get final instructions

With the last of the class seated, commencement begins. While the brief remarks may be forgotten, that special June afternoon will not.

WHO SENIORS EARN MOMENT OF GLORY

It is June 2nd, a cool breeze blows in the lobby doors, making this year different from others in that it is not stifling hot. The hallway billows with blue and maroon robes. Later, parents and friends shuffle through the mass to deliver bouquets of flowers to girls and handshakes and congratulations to the boys. Quickly the gymnasium is occupied with the largest crowd of the year for the annual climax called commencement.

At ten minutes 'till two, the band files into their seats and strains of "Brian's Song" move the air. It sets a melancholy mood. Outside the seniors line up in the hall, exchanging last minute words and last minute memories one last time.

Soon the ceremony begins with "Pomp and Circumstance" as two honor guards, Patty Ernest and Karen Bilbrick, lead the senior class to their seats. The combination of the music and that last walk bring tears to a few seniors' eyes. The rear guards, Jennifer Stawicki and Mark Willy, end the entrance.

After the national anthem and a few words from Mr. Fetty, Jill Haddon rises to give the Salutatorian address. Following her are co-Valedictorians Shawn Sheehy and Sandi Fitch. Sandi's speech strikes the minds of many juniors present because she reads Robert Frost's "The Road Not Taken," a poem which they studied in English. As tradition dictates, senior choir members sang "A Special Place" with clarinet accompaniment by Greg Ernest. Each graduate was in the spotlight when called up on stage to receive his or her diploma.

Soon the moment arrived that all had been waiting for: the tassel ceremony. Lead by Melissa Staples, the Class of 1985 moved their tassels from right to left in unison. Then, with a final cheer, 88 blue and maroon caps were cast toward the rafters. When they came down, 88 lives would change forever.

WHEN?

JUNE 6: DAY OF DELIVERANCE

Amazingly, there was one day of school that everyone actually looked forward to: June 6, the last day. No longer would we pack ourselves like sardines on endless bus rides. No longer would we endure morning announcements, waiting to hear of a new rule for which detentions would be assigned. No longer would we eat pizza in the cafeteria every Thursday.

Algebra students would no longer face torturous homework assignments from Mrs. Love. Gone were the smelly dissected worms and frogs from biology. Silenced were the corny jokes in Mr. Gorball's band class.

There would be no more athletic practices to sweat over. Student Council projects were now history. The last sophomore raffle ticket, a loser, of course, hit the trash can. The Cat Tales newspaper staff had gored its last ox.

Classrooms which, somehow, could be simultaneously frigid and feverish emplied with a speed any track coach could be proud of. Textbooks burst from lockers like hostages returning home to freedom. Teachers actually smiled.

At 10 a.m. the doors strained at their hinges and a vacuum created by fleeing adolescents peeled old posters off the Commons bulletin board. Incredibly, most didn't even pause at the vending machines. Perhaps it was fear of being trampled to death. Perhaps it was instinct like lemmings running to the sea.

One last time, the big yellow sardine can bulged, then chugged on out to 133rd Avenue. We were free! Vacation was here. We made it through!

But as the last blue-jeaned bottom hit the sticky green vinyl bus seat, the first true sound of summer vacation was heard when someone asked, "Whadda ya gonna do?" And true to form, someone answered, "dunno. I'm bored."

It was a perfect day.

The finale truly was spectacular, as the chairs stage their last big show of the year at Spring Spectacular. Moments before, a slide show concluded and the curtains opened as backlit silhouettes the singer against the plants.
